The Carmel Pine Cone Cymbal

A very merry CHRISTMAS

This Christmas we may not have so much to rejoice about as on others in the past. Some of us have husbands, fathers, brothers, sons away fighting that we may be secure at home, but we defeat the purposes of their sacrifice if we do not enjoy as much as we can the security they are providing. Those of us who have children in our family and our circle of friends are doubly bound to make this Christmas cheerful and not add to the young people's misfortune in having to spend a portion of their childhood—what should be their carefree years—in a period of wartime uncertainty.

We cannot ignore the war, but accepting it, we can still find we have cause for encouragement and a measure of happiness.

In spite of world upheaval, life is better now than it was on that first Christmas. Through the centuries wars have come and gone in fairly regular rhythm, but the progress of man has moved steadily forward. We have made conquest over disease, and ignorance. We shall continue to do so. We have reason to hope there may come a time when we may develop a technique for living in peace with our fellows. We have already achieved it within the city, the state and the nation. It is only one step farther to achieve it among nations.

So let us draw the curtains against the dimout, light up the Christmas tree and look forward with hope and faith to a day of Peace on Earth to Men of Good Will.

A sincere wish for a Merry Christmas from:

CLIFF AND WILMA COOK, SUNNY AND THE STAFF: IRENE, KATIE AND MARIAN.

Taubles Refuses Candidacy for City Council

Dr. G. H. Taubles whose appointment to the City Council was urged by the Pine Cone Cymbal, had the whole-hearted support of the citizens of Carmel, and the serious consideration of the council, early this week asked that his name be withdrawn from consideration offering as his reason, his ill health.

This leaves the city council with three candidates under consideration, Mayor Pro Tem P. A. McCreery informed us.

At the time the Pine Cone Cymbal closed its forms, the councilmen were investigating the background anl qualifications of the candidates before sounding them out as to their willingness to serve in the past left vacant by former Mayor Keith Evans' going into the army. According to law decision will have to be reached before the next Wednesday council meeting, the deadline for making the appointment. Otherwise, a city election would have to be held to fill the vacancy, a contingency the council does not favor because of the expense involved.

One matter, that of who is to be mayor, has been settled among the councilmen and will become official at Wednesday's meeting. They have agreed that they want P. A. McCreery, who has been serving as mayor pro tem since Evans' resignation, to continue to preside over the council table.

The withdrawal of Dr. Taubles from the picture will be a severe disappointment to a number of Carmel people, but for some time he has been suffering from arthritis which has made the work he did as head of the Red Cross difficult and trying. It would be impossible for him to undertake the work that would devolve on him if he had to serve on the city council, he revealed.

He has served the community so unselfishly and maintained so strict a silence about himself, that the town at large was not aware of his suffering until the popularity of his candidacy forced

Firemen Hold Annual Party

Carmel Fire Department held its annual Christmas dinner and dance at the Fire House on Tuesday evening, December 22. Auxiliary Firemen and members of the City Council, with their wives were among the fifty-six guests who were entertained by the department. Arrangements were in charge of Jean Ricketts and his Social Committee.

Back from Building Highways, Batting Mosquitoes in Alaska, Gardner Tells of Adventures

He's Mrs. Dowgiallo's boy — Harvey Gardner. And between the 13th of last May and the day last week when he surprised his family by walking in unannounced, he has had some mighty thrilling experiences.

It started with an article he and two classmates in the first year of civil engineering at Salinas Junior College happened to read. Men were wanted in Alaska, to work on the new military highway. Harrison King, William Johnson and Harvey Gardner went to San Francisco, signed up, and four days later were on their way as part of the surveying gang. Their first adventure occurred ten hours out of Seattle, when their boat suddenly struck some unidentified obstacle, listed heavily to port side, and amid general confusion had to steam slowly back to Seattle.

They arrived in Valdez on the 26th—by a coincidence Harvey's 19th birthday, and were assigned to an army camp in charge of a negro contingent of engineers. Mess kits, cots and blankets were distributed, and Harvey's birthday dinner consisted of potatoes, corn, lima beans, stew, cranberry sauce and two tablespoonsful of peach jam.

"It was swell food — separately," he says, with a very boyish twinkle in his eye. "Trouble was, it all got jumbled together in my

Mrs. Rendtorff Reappointed to Library Board

The reappointment of Mrs. Karl G. Rendtorff for a term of three years to the library board was assured at an adjourned meeting of the City Council Monday evening at 5 o'clock when the councilmen requested City Attorney Peter Ferrante to draw up a resolution to be presented at the next meeting, Wednesday, December 30, when the reappointment could be made official.

A letter from the board of trustees requesting the reappointment was addressed to the Council by Paul C. Prince, secretary.

At this same meeting the Curfew Ordinance became a law with its final reading and the affixing of City Clerk Saidee Van Brower's signature. It is published in

Arne Halle, Don Lyon Meet Again At Camp Murphy

For those who read with interest an article in the December issue of the Redbook, giving the history of the Signal Corps, a description of the Fort Monmouth Officers' Training School, the highly specialized Radar school, and emphasizing the superior mental requirements demanded for advancement in this branch of the service, an added lustre is given two of the stars displayed in the window of the Bank of Carmel—those representing Arne F. Halle, former assistant cashier, and Donald A. Lyon, head teller of the organization.

Inducted into the Signal Corps at different dates—Arne in the early part of May and Don on the 1st of July — it was a welcome coincidence which found these two close friends, who made their home together here in Carmel, stationed for a brief period this month in Camp Murphy, Florida. It was all the more welcome, since their preliminary training took them far apart, and their subsequent schooling will again separate them.

Their basic training took them both for a space to Camp Crowder, Missouri. From there Arne Halle was sent to Radio Television school in Kansas City, from which he graduated on September 5. Next came Camp Murphy, and attendance at Radar school. Last week he was selected, with high commendations from his instructors, to proceed to Officers' Candidate School at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey.

Don Lyon was sent from Camp Crowder to National Radio school in Los Angeles, from which he graduated in November. Then came Camp Murphy, and his present attendance at Radar school in Florida.

LITTLE RED SCHOOL HOUSE, PRUSSIAN BLUE

When we frown on "progressive education" and cry for the "good old ways," we are asking for a return to a system of education we borrowed from Prussia, a system out of which grew the seeds of the world's present turmoil.

Dr. Edward O. Sisson who has spent a life-time in the study of educational methods and systems, beginning his research in 1903 in Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria and German-speaking Switzerland, describes the Prussian system and its effect in present day Europe in an article he has written for the feature page of this issue of the Pine Cone Cymbal.

Carmel Sends Its Letter to Santa; Kisses Requested

The kids write letters to Santa, but the rest of the town tells it to the Pine Cone Cymbal.

"What do you want Santa Claus to bring you?" we asked Judge Ross.

"I want him to bring me a little peace and quiet and a vacation from being an overbearing old judge. I've been mad for three days."

"What at?"

"People—they get drunk. I bawl them out, and they tell me a hard luck story — like the fellow home on leave after having two convoys shot out from under him — and I soften up, and then look what happens—he goes out, gets drunk all over again and his wife bawls me out for letting him go in the first place. I want peace and quiet and a vacation from being an overbearing old judge."

"What do YOU want for Christmas?" we asked one of our city councilmen.

"Love and kisses," he murmured exotically, "but don't quote me."

We didn't ask Ted Kuster what he wanted because he'd already got his Christmas present — a ticket from Ed. Jelich for double parking. It wasn't fair. Kuster ran out of gas in front of Florence Leidig's. He couldn't find his A book in the pockets of his red reversible coat, nor in the pockets of his sky blue corduroy pants. He couldn't push the car to the curb because his doctor tells him never to do anything like that. Rushing, so as not to leave the car in the middle of the street any longer than necessary, he headed for home, but couldn't find the A book there, either.

Marion Revives "Bluegrass" at Lions Meeting

Guest of honor at the weekly Lion's Club meeting on Tuesday night, George Marion dipped into his rich repertory of stage roles and recreated a scene which delighted Broadway back in the early '20s.

"You could have heard a pin drop," reports Lloyd Weer. "Honestly, we all sat on the edge of our chairs, listening."

The scene chosen by Mr. Marion was from the famous old racing play, "Bluegrass," by Paul Armstrong, in which he portrayed an ancient darkey called Old Folks. Only two figures appeared on the stage during the scene — Old Folks seated beside a barn door and "My Lady," the old racing mare he had once trained, leaning from her stall to nuzzle his woolly head from time to time, as if she understood and appreciated his words. For Old Folks has heard that her foal is running that day in Louisville, and memory carries him back to "My Lady's" last race. His reminiscences, dramatic, moving, timeless, were beautifully interpreted by George Marion.

Friends Pay Tribute to Otto Bardarson

Tribute was paid to the memory of Otto W. Bardarson at a memorial service held at Sunset School Auditorium Sunday afternoon.

"As the Sunset School has increased and the high school been added to the system, the outward expansion has been matched by an inner growth of plan and purpose, one might say of soul. Our young people will go out into life wiser and stronger for his teaching, our schools will continue to grow and develop, built on the foundation he has laid. We shall all work to make them as he would have wanted them to be, still finer, still more responsive to the needs of our children. As we work together to that end, trustees, teachers, parents, children and the community at large, we shall have as our constant inspiration the devoted and beautiful life of Otto Bardarson."

These words spoken by Miss Clara Kellogg on behalf of the community crystalized the feeling of the friends, townspeople and children who had come to honor the memory of the man who through fifteen years of unselfish devotion in the building up of the Carmel schools, community service and personal contacts had entrenched himself in the heart of so many that his loss was a source of personal grief to his fellow townsmen.

On the stairs to the flower-banked stage students in choir robes sang several hymns and folk songs.

J. W. Getsinger, representing the teachers, Peter J. Ferrante, the school trustees and Dr. James E. Crowther, the church, spoke briefly. Eleanor Smith played a cello solo accompanied by Betty Smith and Mrs. Edith Anderson sang a solo accompanied by David Marrs.

Private funeral services were held earlier in the day in Monterey and cremation took place in Watsonville Monday.

DELAY NOT LOCAL

The office force had caught up with the incoming Christmas mail and had it distributed Wednesday afternoon, Acting Postmaster Fred Bechdolt said yesterday. Any delay in the receipt of mail and packages will be due to the fact that the mail has been delayed somewhere en route and not to a jam of mail in the local post office.

The hard working force has been able to handle the mail steadily as it came in throughout the holiday season.

SEE YOU AGAIN NEW YEAR'S DAY

We are fortunate this year that our publication date falls on Christmas and New Year's Day. Preparing the paper this week has been a special pleasure because running through our mind as we work has been the warming thought that the Pine Cone Cymbal goes into your home on a day reserved for your family and good friends. That the Pine Cone Cymbal is included in the latter group you have shown us in many ways: in your personal letters, your spoken encouragement, your participation in the paper by sharing your ideas with our fellow townsmen in discussions in the columns of the paper and by your generous contributions of articles and news stories. Your friendliness and encouragement have helped us more than you know in this, our first year with the paper. You have made this Christmas doubly happy for us.

Carolers Usher In Christmas

True to Carmel tradition last night at 7:30 o'clock the voices of the Carolers rose in "Come All Ye Faithful" as they gathered for their Night - Before - Christmas round at the Harrison Memorial Library.

Moving up Ocean avenue, singing God Rest You Merry Gentlemen, Little Town of Bethlehem and Jingle Bells, they brought Christmas officially to Carmel.

Shut-ins were gladdened by the sound of their voices as they went along the start-lit streets. Silent Night, Sleep Holy Babe, all the songs that belong to the season took on added sweetness in the crisp air under the pines.

In the group were Mrs. E. J. Atter, Mrs. H. A. Burgers, Mrs. Grace Howden, Mrs. H. R. Kern, Miss Estelle Koch, Mrs. Charles Walker, Mrs. W. B. Williams, Carl Bensberg, Robert Vandenburg, Charles Walker, E. J. Atter, Spencer Kern and R. E. Manhire.

New Olio Planned For Holidays

The Troupers of the Gold Coast have added new olio acts for their Christmas and New Year's Eve performances in the First Theater, Monterey. The Christmas performance will be played this Saturday night, December 26. The Sextette from "Lucia," starring Louise Welty, Pat Shepard, Darwin Law, Henry Fisher and Dan Welty, is a brilliant and hilarious new number. "Honey Boy" has been revived, with delectable new costumes fashioned by Rhoda Johnson, for the three girls.

The New Year's Eve performance by the Troupers of the Gold Coast has become a tradition. For the last three years, the First Theater has been entirely sold out for the December 31 show, and reservations are already coming in for this year's merry farewell to 1942.

Following the melodrama and olio on New Year's Eve, all former Troupers of the Gold Coast are invited to drop in at the First Theater, anytime between eleven and 2 a.m. to exchange New Year's greetings, and drink the wassail cup of the jolly Troupers, and share in their New Year's Eve party.

The current production at the First Theater is "The Convict's Daughter", or "Jerry the Tramp."

Descendant of Alcott Family Bonnie Withers, Copes with Kids, Writes Poetry, Raises Horses

By IRENE ALEXANDER

I have been told that no adult in his right mind ever attended a Saturday matinee at the Carmel Theater. But I attended one last Saturday. I felt curious to see how Bonnie Carol Withers, new manager of our local movie house was coping with that problem before which a squad of strong men might quail — Kiddies' Day at the Movies.

There had been an "incident" before I arrived. But you would never have known it from Bonnie's cool, competent exterior—the unruffled tone of her voice, or the humor in her brown eye. I took in the confiscated bean-shooters on her desk, and I elevated a sympathetic eyebrow.

'Oh, these," said Bonnie. "I always give them back after the show."

"Then the youngsters don't—?

"Oh, yes, they do," she said briskly, and I was conscious of the very firm not-to-be-trifled-with line of her attractive jaw. "But it isn't MOST of the children. Make no mistake — they're going to keep right on having their matinees, and more and more the special pictures for them. You know," she leaned across the desk, "I sometimes wonder about a few —a very few — of the papas and mamas! Yes, you can quote me on this. Why does the town have to make a perfectly sensible curfew law? And why is it that practically one hundred per cent of the little tads are such gentlemen, while the very ones who are old enough to know better—".

I think it's characteristic of Mrs. Bonnie Withers that she didn't get around to finishing that sentence. Maybe her heart wasn't in it. She told me about Dickie, her favorite eight-year-old movie fan and how she encountered his chubby figure pacing up and down the lobby when "In This Our Life" was about one-third shown.

"What I want to know," he had stopped in front of her to demand, "is whether she marries the doctor or not."

"Why don't you run on back and find out for yourself?" urged Bonnie.

Dickie disappeared into the darkness of the theater, but after ten or fifteen minutes, there he was back again, pacing rapidly up and down, his hands clasped behind his back. Catching sight of Bonnie, he rushed to her.

"Tell me, does she get killed?"

"If you just watch a little longer you'll find out . . . "

He was off like a shot. Later when the picture was over Bonnie saw him striding out among the others, his chest high and his eyes alight.

"How did you like it?" she asked.

"Oh, swell!"

"Aren't you glad I didn't spoil the ending for you?"

He waved his hand casually and spoke with gentle masculine condescension. 'Oh, sure. Never pay any attention to me. I'm the kind of a guy who is always asking questions."

Bonnie Carol Withers comes naturally by her sympatic with childhood. She's a descendant of the Alcotts —and Louisa May did pretty well by the youngsters in 'Litte Women" you remember. It's natural, too, that writing was her first vocation — newspaper writing, to be exact. She started in her home town, Portland, on the Portland Oregonian, at an early age. Radio was in its infancy then, and the budding young assistant to the Sunday Editor used to wander up to the eighth floor where the Oregonian's station, KGW had its studio. Before long she was singing over the air evenings in the Hoot Owl program, and trying to decide between a radio or a newspaper career. The Oregonian won, and Ben Hurr Lampman, Sunday editor, cured her, so Bonnie asserts, of writing poetry.

'That is," she added, rather wistfully I thought, 'he almost cured me."

Later, when she was working on the San Francisco Bulletin, radio won out for a time. Or perhaps it was homesickness, and the joy of running into most of the old KGW gang at ABC. Dick Heller

BOX C-1

Camp Gruber, Okla.
Dec. 14, 1942

To the Editor of the Pine Cone:

Just a few lines from a Carmel boy who is very homesick. I was so anxious to get out of Carmel and California that I could hardly wait till I got my call from the reception center at the Presidio of Monterey.

Well, after being there eight days, the call came and of all places to go, I never thought I'd end at Camp Gruber. It is located eighteen miles west of Moskogee near the Arkansas River.

It was raining the morning we arrived in Moskogee and a cold rain. It had snowed the night before, so I was told. They herded us into army trucks and we were on our way to camp. If the boys at Camp Ord think it's muddy during the rainy season, they should come to Gruber. It's a foot thick or more. And if you have a pair of G. I. shoes like I have you take one step and leave them behind.

Of course, I've not been out of camp yet and won't be able to till the middle of January. But putting that all aside, give me good old Carmel any time. The village folks don't know how lucky they are.

I do like army life — at least what I've seen of it which is not very much, as I was only here three days and landed in the hospital. When I'm out again, I'll sure be a dumb rookie, as my company will be far ahead in their drilling.

Well, this is not a very interesting letter, but there is not

Carmel Sends Its Letter to Santa

Then he remembered and hustled back. Yes, there was the A book in the car, and a ticket for double parking from Jelich.

As for Jelich — he wants to keep out of Kuster's way for Christmas.

Jelich's boss, Chief of Police Roy Fraties, wants three balls to hang over the door of his office, because he's calling himself "Uncle" now. "Look at all this lost and found stuff nobody ever calls for — like a pawn shop. Three pair of glasses—good ones, but they don't suit anyone in the police department. Shoes! All kinds, but mostly odd ones. A cigar box full of keys we don't know what to do with, and wallets and purses without anything in them."

Lloyd Lemon's wants are modest. He's just asking Santa for four new tires so he can go hunting in the national forest.

"And what have you done to deserve four new tires?"

"It was my influence with Santa Claus that got parts of the National Forest opened so why shouldn't I get four new tires so I can go hunting in it?"

Dr. John R. Gray says he wants Santa to bring about four car-loads of common sense and distribute it around town.

We're not so enthusiastic about that one. As a matter of policy, the Pine Cone Cymbal opposes any change that might destroy the spirit of old Carmel.

To the Editor,
Carmel Pine Cone-Cymbal

It is obvious from Miss Holmes' letter that she did not hear Mr. Roberts' talk at The Playhouse, or she would have realized that his remarks about American "practicalness" were in a discussion of an article in "Life" and that he was saying that Americans were something much better than merely "practical." His manner suggested that they, like the English, could take a joke against themselves. I envy Miss Holmes the young people of her acquaintance, if they really are led from looking at "Superman to the reading of Goethe's "Faust."

Speaking as an American, it is not, perhaps, a good proof of America's practical spirit for Miss Holmes to refer to her own country as the "greatest nation of all time;"—there is in human nature a certain "cussedness" which is roused to argument by statements quite so sweeping.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

"If you love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth." These words from John comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, December 27, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Christian Science."

Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars: . . . And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne," (Rev. 12: 1, 5).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "The impersonation of the spiritual idea had a brief history in the earthly life of our Master; but 'of his kingdom there shall be no end,' for Christ, God's idea, will eventually rule all nations and peoples — imperatively, absolutely, finally — with divine Science," (p. 565).

High Mass at 11 a.m.

This will be Weigand's mass in honor of St. Joseph, with Turner's Gloria and Credo in honor of St. Cecelia. Tenor will be Jose Wille, sopranos: Marigold Guilick, Frank Passailaigue, Edith Fonteneau, Mrs. R. C. Gibbs; altos: Mrs. Gladys Young, Betty Fonteneau; tenor: Carl Bensburg; bass, Sam Miller.

Noel Sullivan will play Christmas carols on the organ before and after the mass.

Father Hildrick Hobrecht, a teacher at the Franciscan seminary at Santa Barbara, will preach at the high mass. He will hear confessions on Christmas Eve.

SUNDAY, DEC. 27, 1942

"Dealing in Futures" will be Dr. Crowther's sermon theme on Sunday morning at the Church of the Wayfarer. As we face the New Year it is well to remember that every day we shall be dealing in futures. We cannot know the details of the unknown way, but we may know the ultimate goal at which we aim. Because of the vast issues involved, we must walk humbly yet courageously. The guest organist on Sunday will be Miss Elinor Smith. She will play, "Nazareth," Gounod; "Lift Thine Eyes," Mendelssohn; "He Shall Feed His Flock," Handel; "Legend," Tschaikowsky; "The Heavens Declare His Glory." The service begins at eleven; visitors are cordially invited.

PRUSSIAN EDUCATION

By Dr. Edward O. Sisson

When we look back over history we find that Prussia created the first organized system of universal education in history; and it was the Hohenzollern kings themselves who took the lead, although of course they were aided by a succession of able educational leaders. Long before the birth of our nation, the father of Frederick the Great, Frederick William I, undertook to provide schools for all the children in the kingdom; if any sovereign in Europe or elsewhere, had previously taken any such resolve, I am not aware of it. His son, in spite of enormous pre-occupation with war and political turmoil, drove on with the work, as did his successor, Frederick William II. How much this farsighted and pioneer action on the part of these rulers may have contributed to the phenomenal advance of Prussia and ultimately of Germany no one can say. But we must look upon their policy with deep respect.

To go back a little further we note that the Reformation, largely Germanic in origin and scope, had already broken the hold the Church had had on education, and the states, or perhaps we should say the rulers, had begun to seize control of schools themselves. In any case Prussia took the lead here also, and by 1794 took complete control of all schools in the Kingdom; "Schools and universities are state institutions . . . may be founded only with the knowledge and consent of the State . . . are under the supervision of the State, and are at all times subject to its examination and inspection." So read the General Civil Code issued in that year. Again Prussia was far in advance of other nations, in a line which all were ultimately to follow.

We may sum up by saying that Prussia and Prussianized Germany have taken national education seriously longer than any other people and more seriously longer than any other people excluding ourselves. For example, at a time when our children were taught by a teaching staff 85% women, mostly immature and untrained, and using teaching only as a stop-gap between graduation and marriage, the great majority of German teachers were men, mature, thoroughly trained, experienced, who devoted their lives to their profession. We have made some advance, even great advance, but we still lag far behind Prussian thoroughness in this respect. It was this quality in the German scene that made Horace Mann, the pioneer of the American public school movement, admire German education, and point to it as a model, in some ways, for our attention.

Such praise for the German scheme may surprise and perhaps irritate some readers; but it is useless to deny the facts or to refuse to learn from them. It is fashionable among us to boast of our schools and magnify their service to the nation. In one respect and that of profound importance, the American public school has actually led the advance in education, that is in its passionate endeavor to provide a universal common schooling "for all the children of all the people." In this respect, and with all its shortcomings on its head, that system, with its 30 million learners, from primary grade to university, is the most imposing concrete embodiment of democracy in history thus far. We must add that Soviet Russia is its only comparable rival, and may well outrun us in thoroughness of equality of opportunity. But we did lead, and, must hope, shall still march forward.

So much for the serious purpose, the earnestness, the efficiency of the German system, all of which we may well note and emulate. But there is another side to the picture, even more vital and significant, and as perilous to our cause as the thoroughness might be beneficial. For the basic aims and the pervading spirit of the Prussian scheme are flatly in conflict with democracy and American standards and ideals. The German State, authoritarian, anti-democratic, militaristic, predatory, has assiduously used the school to advance its own political and social ends. Horace Mann saw this and warned his countrymen against it; but American education has never fully recognized the poison nor adequately guarded against it.

The very structure of the German system was radically anti-democratic. The so-called "Volksschule" was a People's school, only in name, and was really a "common people's" school. It was for "gewohnlicher Leute," common people, for "Menschen dritter Klasse," — third-class people, — in a word for "workingpeople" in the contemptuous sense of the word. Into it were herded over 90% of the population; it led . . . not to college or university, but to a manual or menial job. For the upper classes — die Herrenklasse," the "gentlemen," — another type of school radically different, the so-called "higher school" was provided; this school led to the university and so to all posts of power and prestige in the nation. About 7% of the whole population went to such schools. However, the girls even in this privileged group came off very poorly, the great advantages being reserved for the boys.

Thus about 3 or 4% of the youth got into the line of higher education and opportunity. Of this small group part only got to the university, and of these part only passed through. From the vanishing remaining percent who completed university or professional school, came the preponderant mass of the rulers of Germany. Bismarck went even further,—of university students, he said one third worked themselves to death, one third drank themselves to death, and the other third ruled Europe. To put the case in a nutshell from the politico-social angle, 93 per cent of the German people were trained to obey, without question or thought, 2 or 3 percent were taught to obey and to command.

(Note: This is, I think, a fair picture of the general situation as of the early part of this century. Even then some boys from the Volksschule broke through the barriers to university and higher careers. Also even then new types of schools, notably the so-called "Middle schools" were being set up to moderate the rigor of the main scheme. But the main scheme still stood fast.)

The whole scheme of school order, discipline and instruction in the German schools was shaped to achieve these results. All the teachers in boys' schools and many in girls' schools were men, most of whom had served in the army and were still in the reserve. One point struck me from the start, — the pupils asked no questions. I often asked teachers why; they answered substantially the same, — "it isn't necessary; we tell them all they need to know." Among the "things they needed to know" as set forth in the innumerable regulations handed down from above for the instruction one could read — "The pupils must learn that the Hohenzollern monarchs have been the best friends of the workingman," and "The social-democrats are the enemies of the Emperor and of the nation." At that time these same social-democrats constituted the largest single political party in the Reichstag.

We must not forget that this extreme German pattern is after all just the dominant European pattern, and since we sprang from Europe, our schools, especially in early times, were modeled on the European patterns. The picture of the aims, spirit and methods of the German schools, admonishes us to do pretty much the opposite. Not a little of this correction is embodied in what is often called "progressive edu-

A SOLDIER'S CHRISTMAS GIFT

We soldiers, too
Bring You
A Christmas Gift
Look — Mom!
Look — Sis!
Look — Darling!
See — !
Yes — !
Just a warm
Hallowed Space!
We will place You
In the very Heart of it!
Where nothing
Can harm you!
Where loneliness
May look —
But not enter in!

And when we come
Marching HOME!
Then you come
Marching out!
Into our arms!
Till then, — !
Stay in the heart
Of our gift
As we stay
In your hearts!

—By Pvt. Harry Komoorian.

CHRISTMAS MOTHER

I shall not need a Christmas tree,
But I
Shall need a manger
Where a child can lie.
I shall not travel to the Christmas star
But wait at heaven's gate
Where the angels are.
And when the great doors open there will be
One of the lesser angels
Sent to me.
My voice may not be strong to praise the King,
But He will hear my grateful spirit sing.

—Kate Rennie Archer.

LITTLE SHINING ONE

Time has not dimmed your light
Dear Little Shining One!
You dwell among us still
Shadowless as the sun.

Still cradled in the straw
Of hearts too small to bear
Such magnitude of love
For utter self-despair . . .

Knowing themselves more fit
For cattle in the stall,
Than to be chosen shrine
Of innocence at all.

You have not changed; but we . . .
We have not yet begun
To listen and be still
Dear Little Shining One!

—Dora Hagemeyer.

By ELEANOR MINTON JAMES

Max Baer—and Buddy Baer—are at the Presidio of Monterey Reception Center, or were a few days ago. The last time this writer saw Baer was during an en route-to-New York Club Car interview for the Omaha World Herald. Now Maxie's fight talk has quite a different slant. He's strong for the British. Perhaps because this American fighter was treated royally on his visit to England — especially by the nobility.

Mrs. Blanche Gibbs, wife of Major R. C. Gibbs, is head of the energetic crew of Carmel volunteers who did all the gay Christmas decorations at the Carmel USO. All of which being a build up for their old fashioned Christmas Eve party — refreshments and gifts. And for their big Xmas night formal. For this holiday dance Fort Ord men are bringing one of their crack bands.

Amphibians here on the peninsula are offering competition to Fort Ord. As ditto Pre-Flighters at Del Monte will do and as the Navy and Coast Guard already have. It's nice to see cavalry boots around our Carmel streets again. Probably no outfit ever so completely won the village's heart.

"Zip Your Lip" — it really means what it says. One Camp Roberts soldier has been sentenced to 6 months confinement—at hard labor and forfeiture during sentence of $28 per month from his pay. And what he said on the phone was only, "I finished my training yesterday and I'm being shipped out tomorrow. The whole battalion is being shipped." Panorama—Fort Ord newspaper—is cocky because their cantonment has become known, in this "Zip Your Lip" campaign, as "The Quietest Spot in the Nation."

Mrs. Pickett, of Peter Pan Lodge, cut one of the big birthday cakes Saturday night at the Monterey USO on its first anniversary—which was also their Christmas formal dance. Mrs. Charles Shepard, Jr. who broadcast the dance over KDON cut the other birthday cake.

One Presidio corporal is quite the hero of the Monterey USO—Corporal Grubur. Just back from furlough in the southland, he not only had his picture in the L. A. Times with Loretta Young but visited Chester Morris at his home where he hobnobbed with Bing and all the others. What's more he took sweet little Jean Parker, once upon a time a Pasadena girl, ou dancing. At Lew Carrols the announcer pulled a crack, "Well, see our Jean dancing with a Boy Scout." Grubur quickly put him right on this score, saying he was no boy scout but a corporal in the United States Army. The announcer's follow up was "Miss Parker now doing the rhumba with 108 pounds of dynamite!" Corporal Grubur, before war days, was a popular jockey. His brother is now a Bay Meadows jockey.

Letters! Letters! Letters! It's letters and more letters the boys over seas are wanting, writes one son from Guadalcanal. Not smokes, gum, candy, etc. They can get all and more than they want of such things. But they are famished for letters. One soldier's disappointment was complete when he received from some well wishing relative a large box of cigars. And he doesn't smoke. Another got some ties, and silk socks, "And where would I wear those?" Felt sorry for the boy who wrote begging for letters to service men at the fighting front. That is, until I found he, personally had received recently a flat hundred from the States.

When Ensign Nay — looking very tall in his swank turtle neck sweater arrived at the Monterey station the other night and was met by his mother of the films, Mrs. Minniver, he had to get busy right away disengaging Greer Garson's fender which was locked with a Carmel car she had tangled with. "It's this dim out," Miss Garson, hard to recognize with her scarf tied under her chin—said very apologetically, "It just undid me!" Not at all like the heroically calm Mrs. Miniver during that English raid in the film when she had everything so under control. Miss Garson, who lives at Pebble Beach, likes amphibians, incidentally, as well as handsome young ensigns.

Fort Ord soldiers, particularly privates, have been much impresed with Mr. Lushes' willingness to cash checks at Lushes of Del Monte. He has cashed their checks with the greatest casualness. It's a habit of this astute, affable business man. For years he has been cashing checks from all parts of the globe. Did it for ten years in Honolulu, he said, during which time his concern did a million dollars worth of business. How much did Mr. Lushe lose cashing checks indiscriminately? Just $3.00!

At Fort Lewis, Washington, the newest man assigned to the Military Police is Private Sherlock Holmes.

Alison Stilwell Exhibits in City For China Relief

Allison Stilwell, talented daughter of General and Mrs. J. W. Stilwell, returned with her mother from the Bay region last week after making two personal appearances in connection with exhibits of her Chinese paintings.

The first of these was held on the afternoon of December 15th in the Berkeley Women's City Club, and the second from 2 to 11 p.m. on the following day at the China Relief Headquarters in the building of the Chinese Six Companies on Stockton street, San Francisco. All proceeds were donated to the China Relief Fund, and both exhibitions drew a large and enthusiastic attendance. Miss Stilwell's talk and demonstration was introduced in San Francisco by Consul General C. T. Seng, who spoke in English, then translated Miss Stilwell's speech in the Mandarin tongue into Cantonese for the audience. Her paintings were viewed by over a thousand Chinese school children.

The Barn Opens

Saturday night marked the opening of the big, newly decorated barn as tap room extraordinaire of the Mission Ranch Club. The decorations, done by Kay Brownell and Margaret Dienelt, are in tones of plum, yellow and chartreuse against a white background. Panels with a leaf motif by Phil Nesbitt screen the orchestra and an enormous round yellow table has also been adorned by him with a conventionalized design. A large, congenial and merry crowd attended the opening, and a bottle of champagne was offered as a reward for the best name suggested for the new bar. Kay Brownell's suggestion — "The Barn" was chosen, but in her role of hostess she gallantly presented her prize to Captain (Dr.) Wilson of Mayfair House.

The greatest war of all time is causing, on the Long Distance lines of the Nation, the greatest number of telephone calls in history.

Those calls are helping to build ships, to make munitions, to move troops and supplies. They are helping to bring the end of the war closer.

Big though it is, the national network of Long Distance lines has no margins this year for purely personal calls. With copper and many other materials vitally needed for war production, more lines cannot be built at this time.

May we therefore ask you . . . even during the holidays . . . to make only those calls to the war-busy centers which are necessary?

Del Monte Joins Navy

With patriotism as the motif, ceremonies under the sponsorship of the Monterey Chamber of Commerce, including a gala dinner, music by a nine-piece band and eloquent speeches, marked the closing of Del Monte Hotel as a luxury resort on Friday evening, December 18. For the duration it will be used for the training of naval aviation cadets. Honor guests of the occasion were Capt. G. W. Steele, commander of the new pre-flight school, and personal representative of Vice Admiral J. W. Greenslade, commandant of the 12th Naval District; S. F. B. Morse, president of the Del Monte Properties company for many years and Captain Harold S. Gwynne. Speakers for the evening included W. J. Follette, chamber of commerce president, State Senator Edward H. Tickle, B. V. McMenamin, who presented the colors, Commander M. J. Peterson and Col. Ralph S. Grier, who brought greetings from Col. Francis W. Clark, Presidio of Monterey commandant. Messages were also read from Col. Roger S. Fitch, commanding officer at Fort Ord and Dr. George E. Outland, newly elected congressman from this district.

mess kit."

After a night in Valdez, they proceeded 135 miles north by panel truck to Gakona. Here the surveyors were divided into three groups, and as luck would have it, each of the boys found himself in a different gang. Harvey's party drove the first stake on the new road, and from then on worked far ahead of the construction gang.

"What impressed you most about Alaska?" we asked.

"The mosquitoes!" he declared feelingly. "They're enormous. Reincarnation of prehistoric pterodactyls." We meekly let him spell that one, and were no end impressed, ourselves. There was more to hear about them, too. "Why, if you clap your hands up there," he announced, "you bag 14. One of 'em bit me once, looked over his shoulder and ordered me to call him a porter. 'Course after a while they got tame and ate out of our hands. They tell a story about a fellow who got sick in Fairbanks and when he needed a blood transfusion, they just sent up a couple of these, blood - bloated flying rhinos. I never could figure out what the second one was for."

Harvey spoke with enthusiasm of his team mates. The only friction that arose during the months of hard work and isolation came when they discussed the relative prowes of California or Oregon football squads. Among the California rooters was Arthur Noscoviac, brother of Jadwiga Noscoviak (Mrs. Stanton Babcock — so well known in Carmel.)

Glacier water, full of silt which refused to settle, was a problem until they devised a filter of charcoal, rocks and moss. From Valdez to Fairbanks, the "towns" they passed through were scarcely more than roadhouses, trading posts for clothing and supplies. The scenery was beautiful — snowcapped mountains often rising to an elevation of 16,000 feet, with the sky overhead a curious deep blue, filled with huge, fluffy white cumulus clouds. During all of the time the boys slept in tents, washing their own clothes and according to Harvey, enjoying the best food in Alaska. From Tanana they went on a small river boat that carried them off into the wilderness 50 miles beyond Big Delta. For months this was their camp — no signs of civilization — the land of the wild caribou, the moose and the bear. They had brought along a dog for protection, a part husky, part police breed.

"We were sure disgusted," says Harvey, "when he ran through our tents one day with his tail between his legs and a bear at his heels."

Mail and meat were dropped from airplanes at intervals, and as the temperature dropped toward 40 degrees below zero, they became accustomed to wearing reindeer hide mukluks, furhooded parkas, and elbow length mitts of bearskin.

Except for a brief trip to Fairbanks over Labor Day, the gang saw nobody but each other and the native Indians for five months. Finally they met the surveyors working in their direction, and the last spike was driven by Harvey's outfit near Northway, and everybody shook hands. The job was done.

Further work remains — to complete spur roads. But walrus hide boots were wearing thin, and at Tanacross Harvey decided to make a trip home before returning to Whitehorse. During the month he awaited transport by army plane, he attended a native dance. He reports the Indian damsels are extremely shy, never exchanging a word, nor even raising their eyes. One selects a partner, seizes her by the arm and jigs up and down very rapidly to the tune of a couple of old records, played over and over. Native wives are chosen literally on the strength of their teeth, he declares. It is the squaw's job to chew the corrugated markings at toe and heel of the walrus mocasins — and a wise husband is one whose wife can produce a sizeable output.

After spending the holidays with his family in Carmel (which he insists is chilly after the winter weather of Alaska) Harvey expects to return to Whitehorse and the job of making further roads for Uncle Sam. — I. A.

TODAY every patriotic American is interested in getting the most for his money by buying more carefully, by taking care of the things he owns and by avoiding waste.

As helpful suggestions to these Home Front war efforts, here are four examples for improving the service from your Natural Gas heating equipment. Do these things now. Winter condition your heating devices. Prevent fuel waste and save money.

1. Take off the grill on your floor furnace or wall register. Have a cardboard carton handy and go to work with a brush or vacuum cleaner. A pancake turner can serve to lift out heavy dirt.

2. Is yours a forced-air furnace? Then take out the filter pads. Give them a good cleaning or replace with new pads. Or better still, have a heating dealer check over the furnace, fan, motor, controls and pilot light.

3. Take a look at the vent pipe that connects your heater or other gas equipment to the flue. If it is rusted out or it leaks have it repaired or replaced now.

4. Watch room temperature and save gas. Overheating is not healthy anyway. If your open fireplace has a damper—close it when the gas heat is on. It is good economy.

We are fortunate in California to have a fuel like Natural Gas. The supply is sufficient for all essential needs and its delivery, flowing in a pipe, creates no transportation problem.

Keep warm, but do not overheat your house. Stay healthy but do not waste Natural Gas. Save fuel. Save Money. Buy War Bonds and Stamps.

Duration-ize your Gas Heating Equipment with Proper Care, Proper Use and Timely Repair.

ORDINANCE NO. 32 N. S.

AN ORDINANCE RELATING TO THE PROHIBITION OF MINORS UNDER EIGHTEEN YEARS OF AGE LOITERING IN PUBLIC PLACES AND STREETS DURING CERTAIN HOURS

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1: The Ordinance Code of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, adopted by the City Council of said City on the 15th day of April, 1940, is hereby amended by the addition to Part IV, Division 1 thereof, of Article 13, Sections 590 to Section 594b, both inclusive, which shall read as follows:

"SECTION 590: It shall be unlawful for any minor under the age of eighteen years to loiter, wander, stroll, loaf or to congregate or be upon any public street, sidewalk, place, alley, square, grounds, theaters or places of amusement within the corporate limits of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea between the hours of ten thirty o'clock P.M. and daylight of the following day.

"SECTION 591: The provisions of Section 590 of the Ordinance Code of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea shall not apply if the minors dealt with in said Section 590 are accompanied by parent, guardian or other adult person having the care and custody of such minor; or if the presence of said minor in a public place, street, sidewalk, park or square is connected with, and required by some legitimate pursuit in which said minor is engaged or if said minors are returning to their respective places of residence between 10:30 P.M. and 12:30 A.M. from a place of amusement or entertainment permitted as provided in Section 594b of this Code.

"SECTION 592: Any minor under the age of eighteen found in any of the places prohibited in Section 590 hereof and during the time prohibited to be therein or thereon, shall be immediately apprehended and taken to the proper detention ward for minors, either county or city, as the same may be, to be restrained until suitable process can be issued.

"SECTION 593: It shall be the duty of the Chief of Police of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea to file juvenile delinquency proceedings against said or any minor who has violated the provisions hereof on the following morning and as soon as Court shall be opened.

"SECTION 594: That the parents or guardian of said minor so apprehended and restrained of his or her liberty shall be duly notified and cited to appear in accordance with the Juvenile Court Law of the State of California.

"SECTION 594a: That any parent or guardian obstructing or interfering with the full and complete enforcement of Section 590 or any minor who shall violate the provisions of said Section 590 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

"SECTION 594b: Any person of good moral character over the age of twenty-one years may apply in writing to the Chief of Police of said City of Carmel-by-the-Sea for a permit to give a dance or party for the benefit of minors referred to in Section 590, which said application shall state: (1) the name, age and place of residence of the applicant; (2) the date when and the place where such entertainment is to be held; (3) the time when such entertainment is to commence and be concluded; (4) the name of the organization, if any, under the auspices of which said entertainment is to be conducted.

The Chief of Police of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, upon receipt of such application, shall issue to the applicant a permit in writing stating that such dance or party may be held.

Any person making a false statement or represetation on said application shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

SECTION 2: The City Clerk of said City is hereby instructed to cause this Ordinance to be published once in the CARMEL PINE CONE CYMBAL, the official newspaper of said City within fifteen (15) days after its final passage and approval.

SECTION 3: All ordinances and parts of ordinances in conflict with this ordinance are hereby repealed.

SECTION 4: This Ordinance is hereby declared to be urgent and necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety and shall take effect and be in force forthwith from and after its final passage and approval. The following is a statement of such urgency: That recent dimout ordinances passed by the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea make the use of the streets, alleys and highways of said City dangerous and said Ordinance is immediately required for the safety of said minors.

PASSED AND ADOPTED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL - BY - THE - SEA this 21st day of December, 1942, by the following vote.

Bonnie Withers Copes with Kids

was production chief, and before she could even say hello to her old pals, he offered her a dazzling job as a publicity executive—private office, chairs done up in red leather and everything.

Many of us here in Carmel remember Johnny Patrick, the boy who was half of the popular old 'Cecil and Sally" continuity before he went on to playwriting for Broadway and Hollywood. Putting Johnny over was Bonnie Wither's first job of radio promoting.

When ABC went out of existence as a network, she went over to the NBC station on Sutter street as a reader with Bennie Walker—then for the next couple of years as the producer of "Feminine Fancies" over KFRC, with Bill Goodwyn her staff announcer, originating some of the copy as well.

Her marriage to one of the three pioneer announcers of NBC and the establishment of a country home in Contra Costa county interrupted a broadcasting career, but introduced her to what she declares is her major enthusiasm —ranching and the breeding and training of thoroughbred horses. It had to remain an avocation, however. In 1936 she was again on the staff of the Portland Oregonian, and E. Palmer Hoyt (now the publisher and owner) put her in charge of launching and developing a new feature, called the "Young Oregonian." Under her highly successful direction the youngsters of Portland took over the third floor, established a great variety of hobby clubs, ranging from junior reporters to specialists in doll-dressmaking. Following a trip to Hollywood with the juvenile winner of an essay contest, Bonnie Withers stopped off again in San Francisco, and this time organized a news bureau of her own, supplying news and photographs to a long string of publications. Photography became more than a hobby with her.

"Turned my bathroom into a laboratory," she explained. "Read photographic supply catalogues in my sleep and bought every kind of equipment I could lay my hands on." She sighed — then smiled. "My speedographic went into the army last week."

It was her love of high-spirited horses that led to a first acquaintance with Mrs. Victor McLaglen—an acquaintance which ripened into devoted friendship and resulted in Bonnie Withers becoming secretary to Victor McLaglen, spending most of her time at the Balfe Ranch in Fresno county, where she attended to details of its management, directed its publicity and helped Mrs. McLaglen exercise the thoroughbred hunters for which the ranch is famous.

When Mrs. McLaglen's death occurred last April, Bonnie Withers decided to come to Carmel. At first it was only with the idea of a change, among scenes which carried pleasant memories — for she has ridden often at Pebble Beach in the past. But she lingered, as people do in Carmel, and the next thing she knew — presto, she was managing the Carmel Theater.

Only one thing bothers Bonnie Carol Withers—(No, it isn't the way Mrs. Carmel's Big Boy Who Ought to Know Better occasionally acts at Saturday matinee!) It's the fact that Sagewood, her pedigreed filly, is miles away at pasture, and transportation is out of the question now.

I was looking at Sagewood's photograph when sounds from the auditorium indicated that the matinee was over. Bonnie sprang up, seizing the beanshooters to restore them to their owners. At the door she turned.

"Oh, I'll have Sagewood here, one of these days," she announced cheerfully. "If I have to walk there and ride her all the way back."

I haven't a doubt in the world that Bonnie Withers will do just that—and cope manfuly as well with Carmel Kiddies' Matinee.

Otto Bardarson Scholarship

The memory of Otto W. Bardarson is to be perpetuated by a scholarship that will help some Carmel boy or girl to go to college.

A group of people who knew where Bardy's interests lay met on Tuesday night to make plans for the establishment of a fund to finance the scholarship. It is to be a perpetual fund built up by contributions from people of the community, the interest derived to be used for Carmel boys and girls whose character and scholarship warrants their going on to college but who are financially unable to do so without help.

Contributions to the fund in checks and in bonds are being left at the Carmel banks and at the Pine Cone Cymbal office to be turned over to the trustees appointed to manage it: Peter Ferrante, Clara Kellogg, Mrs. Vera Peck Millis, Dr. James E. Crowther and D. L. Staniford.

The committee that met to establish the fund included G. E. Getsinger, D. L. Staniford, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shand, Mrs. Vera Peck Millis, Willard Wheeler, Peter Mawdsley, Mike Blaze, Charles Frost, Miss Clara Kellogg, J. O. Handley, Peter Ferrante and Ed Ewig.
